One sea said to another: Let us contribute, brother, And make a porte-cigarre For a poets home afar. I will supply the amber From out my chymic chamber; Your best sea-foam prepare, And that shall be your share; Thus Ive an emblem brought Of his clear and colored thought, As your white meerschaum shall be Of his stainless probity. A lions head not ill Will show his strength of will. Now though you may refuse The unwonted tube to use, And the skill wherewith tis wrought Should so pass clean for naught; Yet take it, --and that ends it, --For the sake of the love that sends it. Brussels, August, 1860. WITH A HAIR BRACELET. From two dear heads is wrought this braid Around your wrist to set, As if a trinket would be made A loving amulet. MISCELLANEOUS. MISCELLANEOUS.
