Excerpt: . . . 11 hundreds of years of history and open up opportunities for the countries of Central Asia, as well as South Asia. We have and will have a long and very enduring strategic relationship with Pakistan, to work together for its success in all these areas, but achieving our goals in Pakistan is going to take time. So how can we help Pakistan succeed politically, economically, and militarily I talk about the four Es - education, economy, en-ergy, and elections. First, we are supporting the renewal of Pakistans public edu-cation system. If you look at all the various money we put in through project assistance, through the Fulbright program, through their own budget, it is well over 100 million a year that we put into the reform and expansion of education in Pakistan. That is a small part of their own efforts to reform and expand their edu-cation system. They have, I think, gone from 1. 3 billion a year on education from the Federal budget in 2003 to about 2. 3 billion a year spent in education from their own Federal budget. Our assist-ance helps support that. Second is the reform and expansion of the economy. The economy is growing at 6, 7 percent a year, based on open investment cli-mate, open economy, and that is doing quite well. We want to sup-port and continue that. The third is helping them support the diversification of their en-ergy supplies. One of the problems that Pakistan faces, particularly this year, is called load shedding. It is basically brownouts, cutting in power to a lot of people. That is one...
