Not illustrated. 1858 Excerpt: .amass his wealth, and pre-- sent it to the King, with words the most soothing in the ears of a tyrant, which confessed himself but as the creature of his monarch s pleasure, and incapable of possessions independent of his will. Thus he contrived for a time to stay the fury of Henry s displeasure, who was never before or after, as now, slow to anger. Never did this bold, bad man, then indeed only commencing the most brutal part of his reign, experience so many relapses and relentings--never did he cast back so many lingering looks at a fallen favourite, or remain so long deaf to the suggestions of enmity, whispered in the hour of amorous dalliance, as in his final separation from the counsels of his faithful Wolsey. The Cardinal had no sooner surrendered the Seal, than he set about taking an inventory of his property, for the purpose already mentioned; and so gorgeous is the description of his wealth, and so illustrative of the interior economy of a nobleman s house of those times, that it ought not to be omitted: --Then went my Lord Cardinal, and called his officers before him, and took account of them for all such stuff and things whereof they had charge. And in his gallery were set divers tables, whereupon lay a great number of goodly rich stuffs; as whole pieces of silt of all colours, velvet, satin, damask, tufted taffeta, grograin, sarsenet, and other things, not...
